Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

I have developed a wide range of analytical skills as they related to my careers in journalism, law and education. As a newspaper reporter, I learned how to ask probing questions to uncover the truth, and how to write concisely for readers about complex issues. As a legal fellow, I worked on law projects involving transnational migrant workers and criminal defense for indigent defendants. As an educator at the university level, I have taught multiple classes in journalism, including media law, basic reporting and copy editing. I also serve as an assistant director in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at Texas State University-San Marcos.

In all of these capacities, I have learned how to think critically and apply analytical skills. In addition, I have extensive experience serving as a volunteer on the boards of directors of national, regional and local nonprofit organizations, including serving as board president for two different organizations.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

Because of my professional training as a journalist and a lawyer, I am skilled at being impartial. In my professional work at the university and in my volunteer work, I have the reputation as being a reasoned and level-headed voice in discussions and deliberations. Journalism taught me to be objective and to consider multiple sides of any story. Law taught me how to advocate for my client and for causes, while also considering the opposing view. Education has taught me the importance of passing on these traits to my students so that they may take a more reasoned approach to the world around them.

In addition, I have completed mediation training at the Austin Dispute Resolution Center in August 2012. Building on my training as a journalist and as a lawyer, I learned how to listen objectively to parties in a dispute and encourage them to reach reasonable middle ground without imposing my own opinions or desires. Indeed, the heart of mediation training involves a skilled facilitator helping two parties reach an acceptable agreement without meddling or influence by the facilitator.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

Austin has a rich history of diversity in many respects. We are a city with strong traditions from a wide range of ethnic groups. While it may not be the most international city in the state, Austin does have sizeable and recognizable ethnic groups that contribute to the city's identity. In addition, Austin is politically diverse, with a mix of a young people finding their political voices (fueled mostly by large universities in the region), older, traditional Austinites looking to retain the city's charm, an influx of current elected officials and their staffs and the stable roster of state employees that continue to serve in a nonpartisan role.

In addition, Austin's central location makes it an attractive destination for just about everyone in the state, whether they're from the Rio Grande Valley, West Texas, the Panhandle or East Texas. Its central location and importance as the state capital makes Austin an attractive place for people to live, raise families and contribute to their communities.

Austin's unique demographics and geographical location make it a model for an informed and representative government. Other cities throughout Texas and beyond are envious of what Austin has to offer, and many try to duplicate our charm.

Our strength has always been the diversity of our people, and will continue to be our strength as the city continues to grow and evolve.

APPLICATION FOR THE INDEPENDENT CITIZENS REDISTRICTING COMMISSION

2013

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

I believe that I have the right mix of experiences, training and background to serve on the Independent Citizens Redistricting Commission. I have lived in Austin for 13 years and have demonstrated a commitment to the community by serving as board president of the Austin Cycling Association for three years (eight-plus years as a board member) and on the board of Envision Central Texas, a nonprofit organization focused on sustainable growth in the region.

In addition to my journalism and law training and experiences as a university professor, I have a great appreciation for diverse voices in government. I am the son of a Mexican-American man from the Rio Grande Valley and an Okinawan woman who became a naturalized U.S. citizen. They taught me the importance of a higher education, and in the process, the need for an educated populace and fair government processes.

With these unique experiences, skills and perspectives, I believe I am an ideal candidate for the commission. If selected, I would be honored to serve my community and give back in this way.
